LEARNING AT CHARFIELD

This week's contribution comes from the Grasshoppers (Y2). The class have researched their class insect and produced information leaflets using videos, books and the internet to find information.

A COMMON GRASSHOPPER

Lubber Grasshoppers

In the deep forest of south America lived the Lubber Grasshoppers. Pressingly they are veterans! They can only jump a foot! They have barite wings but they cant fly. Lubber grasshoppers are violently poisonous. They are culful but there poisonous. They live in vast lands of south Amerces.

What are Grasshoppers?

Grasshoppers are plant-eating insects with long, strong back legs that enables them to launch up high. They live in worm every country up art from cold parts of the world.

What do they have on their body?

They have a strong hard shell called an exoskeleton. Also they have a funny shaped head which has two antennae. The middle part of their body is called the thorax. This is protected by their exoskeleton. Their tail is called the abdomen which is also protected by the exoskeleton. They are very colourful on their body but this is a warning to other creatures that they are toxic.

They have 5 eyes and no ears!
